Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

We like best those Chief Executives who came up to the White House by the hard way, as did Cleveland, Wilson, Coolidge, Garfield, Grant, McKinley, Hoover and others. We think a poor boy who wins to the Presidency knows his country better. We distrust Mr. Roosevelt because of his enormous egotism, the outgrowth of his spoiled, spoonfed childhood. This egotism is reflected in his bitterness toward all successful business in this country. We surmise that having tried a number of times to increase the enormous fortune to which he was heir by engaging in business and having signally failed, that there is something deeper than personal pique in his hostility toward those who have succeeded in business. In the present crisis, in dire need of business brains in managing the defense preparations, the President calls in dollar-a-year men, but he does not trust any of them with the responsibility, for instance, that President Wilson reposed in Bernard Baruch or in Herbert Hoover. The trouble with Roosevelt is, he has never experienced the "seamy of life." He has been a child of good fortune.

But we do not, however, deny that such a man though handicapped, can give his country good service. On the contrary we do heartily approve the measures recently taken to humble Hitler. Furthermore, we think his foreign policy is the only policy any President could put into practice during the present emergency. We lament that he has not leaped to the opportunity to become the national leader and that every act thus far seems tardy. He waits on the voice of the people as a politician, instead molding public opinion, and leading the people as their wartime chief. But he does act, at long last.

Dismissal of all German consuls and agencies in this country will relieve the FBI of an enormous strain and worry and enable it to focus attention upon a smaller group of saboteurs and spies. The German embassy will now be compelled to take over the espionage functions of the consular officers and the embassy can be more easily watched by the FBI than consuls scattered over the country. The fact that Germany and Italy have dismissed our American consuls, need not trouble us too much. Anything they might provide in the way of information that got by the Gestapo would be worthless by the time it reached the State Department in any event. Hitler does things differently than we in our easy doing democracy.

It is particularly pleasing that Fritz Wiedemann, bosom friend of Hitler, has gotten his demittus. We hope his master gives him a captaincy in one of the panzer divions or make him leader of a stuka squadron. We never took much stock in the plaint of the adventurous woman who sued him for back pay, but, as the saying goes, we did not put it past him that he had employed her on sister missions.

But what we like most about the parting with Wiedemann is that he and Harry Bridges will no longer live in the same city. If Bridges eventually is returned to Australia and Wiedemann to Germany, we surmise the two will do less plotting. That they have plotted, anyone cognizant of the use Hitler is making of the communists, can have no doubt. The affrontery of Bridges, on trial as an undesirable alien, and for fomenting revolt against the United States government, in wiring the strikers in the North American aviation plant to "beat a strategic retreat" rather than engage in battle with Uncle Sam's troops, is an amazing spectacle. Back of the strike and Bridges vociferous cheering it on, we have not a doubt in the world, was the hand of Wiedemann.

Freezing the funds of the dic- been done long since. Still, better late than never. So far as funds belonging to our citizens in Italy and Germany are concerned, they were lost anyway, frozen or not. And whereas such funds were only a drop in the bucket compared to our national debt for instance, the funds of poverty stricken Germany and Italy were, to them, of considerable magnitude and of great importance to their espionage activities. Over here spies and saboteurs have to be paid real money. Nobody in the U. S. A. takes their pay in erzatz currency. tators in this country should have

RURAL SCHOOLS CLOSE, MANY GRADUATE

The Blue Tent school closed Friday, June 20th, with a very appropriate program.

Mrs. Lydia Gleason and the girls and boys had made a pleasing adaption of a playet "Golden Treasures", which was given in an open air setting among the pines. The theme exemplified the fact that treasures are not always found as real gold but in the lovely contributions that nature gives us to enjoy. This was followed by an interesting and patriotic tribute to our flag given by the children with the vistiors joining in the "Pledge of Allegiance."

Upon returning to the school musical numbers were given in a pleasing manner by Joyce Arbogast and George Nelosn, who graduated from the Blue Tent school last year. Mrs. Sylva Mosher, general supervisor, presented the diplomas to the two graduates, Katherine Conti and Lewis Nelson.

After enjoying refreshments the happy group departed for a vacation of three weeks before resuming the work for the new term on July 14.

Seawell Blames Pigheadedness Of Both Sides For SRA Relief Failure At Capitol

State Senator Jerrold Seawell in a letter to the Nugget has the following explanation to make of the impasse which resulted in the adjournment of the legislature without providing funds or a plan for meeting the needs of the rapidly dwindling SRA. The letter follows:

Nevada City Nugget
Nevada City, California
Dear Mr. Leete:

The death knell for the California SRA was sounded when the legislature adjourned sine die last Monday night operating under stopped clocks from Saturday noon.

Senate Bill 133, which was passed by both houses and vetoed by the governor, failed to become law because the senate did not override the veto—although an attempt was made on three separate occasions to accomplish this purpose.

I have always believed, and still do, that the county should administer relief through an integrated program without other categorical aids. This, however, could not become law and, realizing it would be a great mistake to adjourn the legislature without attempting some form of compromise, I injected bills in the hope they would at least bring the two conflicting factions together that they might agree upon some form of legislation that would not completely abolish the SRA immediately and pass the relief load back upon the local taxpayers. The bills introduced were not perfect by any means, but were far better than what we now have, which is nothing, except that California real estate in the various counties will have to bear the burden of relief.

In my estimation, this problem and its far reaching effect upon local taxpayers is not one where two different philosophies should collide to the extent that the whole program be junked rather than make a honest, sincere effort to work out a program of compromise to prevent a calamity.

Administration and anti-administration forces adopted a dog in the manger attitude, not giving an inch in either direction, which places the innocent third parties, the relief recipients and the local taxpayers, in the position of receiving the blunt ultimatum that "we do not care what happens to you as long as we are able to preserve our particular philospphy in regard to the relief problem."

I am advised by relief experts that Los Angeles County alone will have to assume a $500,000 additional burden monthly as a result of this action. This also applies proportionately to other large metropolitan areas where the relief load is the heaviest.

Legislation is one thing and common decency is another, and I never can agree with either party that to do nothing is good legislative activity, nor is it good administrative judgment. When the time comes that public officials can not sit down with open mind and discuss state problems honestly and come to an understanding for the public good, then democracy fails and dictatorships come into being. This, to me, is what happened in Sacramento in the closing days of the session. Both sides dictated to the other what they couid have or could not have with the ultimate result that the innocent people involved are the sufferers and not those who failed to exercise common judgment.

The governor states he will not call a special session. The majority of the legislature state they will not vote any funds for relief as long as the state has anything to do with it's administration. With this deadlock confronting us, I personally do not know what the future holds unless the people rise up and demand common sense thinking on the part of both groups and force a decision in this matter.

While it may not be perfect in its conception, it will at least eliminate the hardship upon the taxpayers who own real property. We then may look to the future in hope that we can work out an integrated program that will eliminate political flurries in the future and give California a sound social welfare system.

We, who sat in the middle of this great controversy and made a sincere effort to bring about an adjustment of differences of opinion, have been criticised for jumping from one side to the other. If it is wrong to attempt to work out of a stalemate such as now exicts, then myself and several other senators are to be criticised, but, to me, this is what we were sent to Sacramento to do—to adjust our differences and not to take a pig-headed attitude in regard to the people's welfare. I believe we followed the only course that was open and although we did not succeed we did our best to prevent the legislature and the governor from leaving Sacramento without at least making some effort to bring about a settlement, I assume, of honest differences of opinion.

I sincerely hope the governor will recede from his decision not to call a special session for I believe if he would call into conference various leaders prior to the convening of a special session that both sides could come to an agreement that could be presented at the special session and accepted—thus eliminating the catastrophe that confronts real property taxpayers in this state at this time, and also eliminate the confusion that confronts the various boards of supervisors in attempting to make up their annual budgets and tax rates. The legislature and the governor can and should work out this problem without further delay.

Sincerely yours,
JERROLD L. SEAWELL.

SRA TO DISMISS 2300 EMPLOYES

SACRAMENTO, June 23.—Closing down the SRA because of lack of funds is rather a tremendous job, considering there are 76 office leases to be terminated, 2300 employes to be discharged, $3,500,000 worth of equipment to be disposed of, and complicated records to be closed.

It will take six months to a year to close the deal, although no relief will be dispensed after July 1. The headquarters of the SRA will be in Sacramento to expedite the dismantling.

THE GREATEST LIVING JEW

Many men have talent, but few have greatness; and when an individual has both, he naturally excites the curiosity of the people. Such a man is Dr. Chaim Weizmann, who spoke in New York last week to thousands from the rostrum and to tens of thousands over the air: and it is to answer that curiosity, that a few descriptive words, poor and inadequate though they be, are expressed here.

This British scientist and Jewish statesman was born 67 years ago in a little Russian village, Motele, near Pinsk. In those days, the biblical precept of Abraham to be fruitful and multiply, was taken as a solemn injunction; hence Chaim Weizmann was born one of fifteen children, eleven of whom survive.

Because of his international repute as a Zionist leader, Dr. Weizmann is sometimes thought of as a Jewish careerist. Heaven forbit!—and by the grace of providence, it was forbidden. He was destined by nature to be a worker in the laboratory of nature—a biochemist—for the beneficial enjoyment of man. And a renowned worker in the laboratories of nature, he became; so much so, that after taking his two academic degrees at the German Universities of Freiberg and Berlin, he qualified as a teacher of his science, first at Geneva University and later at Manchester University.

If science was Dr. Weizmann's profession, Zionism was his passion, or better still, in the language of John Gunther, "he was a chemist by day and a Zionist by night."

One incident in his life, at the age of 42, illustrates why Dr. Weizmann is not only gifted but great — perhaps the world's greatest living Jew. In 1916, Britain was facing a dangerous shortage of "acetone," an indispensable chemical to the manufacture of high explosives. In that dark hour of World War I, Prime Minister Lloyd George summoned Dr. Weizmann from Manchester University, where he was professor of chemistry. Dr. Weizmann accepted the challenge. He was put in charge of the "Admiralty Laboratories," and after laboring day and night for one month, he produced a synthetic acetone," assuring Britain of an adequate supply of explosives for the duration of the war.

Britain was gratified and grateful. Lloyd George again summoned him—for the testimonial. He could have title or money. Measured by his country's traditions, the temptation to succumb to the personal glamor or increased comforts was terrific. But he had a passion that reached beyond himself—a passion which John Gunther said had consumed him by night. It was a passion to give his afflicted people a homeland in Palestine. And so this was the only reward he asked for his beneficial discovery; and this was the reward that was granted on November 2, 1917, through the historic issuance of the Balfour Declaration.

For Dr. Chaim Weizmann, that was the commencement, not the end. The genius of his science helped to reclaim the soil; and the greatness of his spirit helped to redeem his people. Today, at 67, he is again doing important research for his country in his special "Admiralty Laboratories," and at the same time, hoping, as Moses hoped, to bring his homeless brethren of Europe to the Promised Land.

THE RIGHT TO WORK

"When he cleared the picket lines at Inglewood, the president was declaring and enforcing the right of any man to hold his job," declares Justus Craemer in his Orange Daily News. "It is fundamental in the law that every man has the right to strike in time of peace, though there may be a question of that right in times of national peril. It is equally fundamental in the Bill of Rights that a man has a right to work."

Look at what happens when you put too many appliances to work on a wiring circuit. The toaster or other appliances are dopey or slow in action. Bread for example gets toasted in eight minutes instead of five or six. That means appliances are not getting the full voltage and slow down when circuits are overloaded.
When a qualified electric contractor or architect specifies adequate wiring for a home he is thinking of your convenient and economic use of electricity now and in the future. Good adequate certified wiring costs little more than "skimpy" or cheap wiring and it soon pays for itself many times over.

REGULATIONS FOR REGISTERING ARE EXPLAINED

SACRAMENTO, June 23 — (UP) —Brig. Gen. J. O. Donocan, state director of selective service, today explained regulations covering the registration for military service of men who have reached the age of 21 since last October. The registration date is July 1.

"Regulations call for the registration of every man in the state who has attained his 21st birth date subsequent to Oct. 16, 1940 and before midnight July 1, 1941," Donovan said.

It is estimated that about 60,000 persons in the state will register.

The order for registration applies to aliens as well as U. S. citizens, including both aliens who have reached the age of 21 since the last R-day and those between ages of 21 and 36 who have arrived in this country in the period.

The registrations will take place at the headquarters of the 283 local draft boards of the state. Donovan said that special registration points also are being established throughout the state where distances exceed 50 miles per return trip for registrants.

Special registrars will be assigned to register men who cannot appear before their local boards or the special registration places because of illness or other valid reasons.

Prisoners and inmates of institutions also are covered by the registration, although their sign-up will be deferred until the day of their release.

Defense Stamps Given Gold Star Mothers

Highlight of the American Gold Star Mothers' national convention in Los Angeles recently was presentation of a defense savings bond stamp book to each mother by the organization's Grand Hostess, Eugenia Clair Flatto. Mrs. Flatto awarded the first book to the new national president, Mrs. William H. Balcom of New York, while the retiring national president, Mrs. Mae Cushman of Hollywood, and [illegible], Mrs. Elizabeth Harrison of Inglewood (left), looked on.

REGIMENT OF PHYSICIANS TO GO TO ENGLAND

Just 24 years after the United States sent its World War contingent of 1,300 doctors to Great Britain, the American Red Cross is answering a similar call from the British Red Cross.

So pressing is Britain's need for more medical men, support of this undertaking has been freely given by President Roosevelt and government directly connected with our own medical defense program.

In virtually every community of the nation, the American Medical Association is aiding the Red Cross by carrying the appeal to the medical profession. As volunteers meet the rigorous qalifications which have been set down for service, their applications are being sent to Washington for final approval by the National Research Council.

Those volunteering will not be required to swear allegiance to Great Britain and in serving will not forfeit their American citizenship. As medical workers they will be protected by the Red Cross Treaty of Geneva.

NEW ELECTRIC FENCE INVENTED

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 23.—An electric fence constructed on the basis of findings in electric shock experiments with humans and animals, and said to be an improvement on any now in use for livestock control, was reported by a University of California engineer here today to the Society of Agricultural Engineers.

The fence is based on a "single impulse" principle, and eliminates some of the hazards of electric fences now in general use by American agriculturists. It is energized by a controller which maintains a high direct current potential on the fence and delivers one single impulse shock instantly on firm contact.

Animals receive a shock on each contact. If a person grasps the fence the impulse rapidly decreases to a safe sustained direct current which may be easily released as soon as recovery from the sudden surprise permits.

The new fence was reported by C. F. Dalziel, assistant professor of electrical engineering, who devised the mechanism in cooperation with James R. Burch, senior student in electrical engineering.

Most electric fences now in general use are based on an intermittent shock principle. A relatively strong current is sent through the fence at intervals of about a second Dalziel said the intermittent shock fence shold be considered inhumane.

Dalziel pointed out that there is a paralysis of the muscles on electric shock. He said that for this and other reasons an animal or human might be unable to free himself from the intermittent shock fence. Under these circumstances "the effect of the repeated shocks would be torture."

RAGE IN HEAVEN TO OPEN WEDNES. ON LOCAL SCREEN

For Ingrid Bergman, 1941 will be her happiest year in Hollywood, and one of complete domestic bliss. When the Swedish star was offered a Hollywood contract two years ago, she at first refused it, because of her husband, Dr. Peter Lindstrum, and their baby daughter, Pia. After making "Intermezzo", her first American film, Miss Bergman hurried back to Sweden and on her return brought Pia, with her. Then, during the making of "Rage in Heaven," her new starring film with Robert Montgomery which comes Wednesday to the Nevada Theatre for an engagement of two days, Miss Bergman was joined by her husband after the long and dangerous voyage from Stockholm had brought him safely to New York and then to Hollywood by plane.

Yellowstone National Park, Wyo.

3,000 steaming, spouting geysers and springs have been erupting up here in Yellowstone's beautiful wooded valleys for thousands of years. One, the fanstastic Castle Geyser, has been doing business in this locality since 50,000 B. C.

Old Faithful is the most famous of the geysers, blasting a stream of super-heated water 150 feet high every hour of the day and night. Its twenty foot cone with a three foot throat disgorges ten to twelve thou- each outburst. Set out on a broad, sand gallons of boiling water with level valley, with a back drop of green forest, its towering eruption of water and billowing steam is a magnificent sight. It goes into action on an average of every 66 1-2 minutes, but will sometimes jump the gun by half an hour and again keep you waiting impatiently a full 80 minutes.

But Old Faithful is gradually fading into second place as far as popularity with the Park's annual half million visitors is concerned. Daisy Geyser is taking the lead. Growing more and more spectacular, this greatly different spout shoots at a low angle, out across steaming, brilliantly colored pools clustered around it, every two hours. When Daisy erupts she lowers the water levels of these pools a foot or two, and, creating a vacuum in her own throat, draws back most of the water she threw out after the violent spray has died down.

You can approach Daisy to within a foot or two of its bubbling, gurgling mouth when it is slumbering between spasms and see what makes a geyser tick. From tremendous and unknown depths the earth's heat creates a powerful force of steam, forcing out water that has trickled for below. Delicately balanced, some of these geysers can be thrown out of kilter merely by a small object tossed into their pools, so the tossing of coins or rocks is forbidden.

Years ago both Old Faithful and Daisy were eclpised in prominence and fame by the now more quiet and erratic Fountain Geyser. It was then the Park's stellar attraction. Now a broad, 60 foot pool of emerald green it occasionally spouts to a height of 75 feet. Its beautiful and unusual coloring comes from the water's natural shade of blue and countless billions of minute algae-animal-plant life—able to live in the water's high temperature. Still a major attraction here, this geyser is an example of how a spout may grow through the years, increase in activity until it becomes famous and then slowly die out and give way to another roaring geyser that is reaching the peak of strength.

Lazy most of the time but magnificent when aroused, Giant Geyser is the Park's loftiest spouter. It shoots a 150 foot stream straight up every 9 to 21 days. I haven't seen it in action yet but am told it keeps an estimated 700,000 gallons of water —22 tons—in the air at one time. She rumbles loudly before and during her 1 1-2 hour display and has blas ed a huge chuunk out of her tall cone during one of her ancient explosions.

The numbeer, size, power and variety of these gesers is unequalled anywhere in the world and are a spectacle that should be witnessed by everyone at least once in their life time.

THIS WEEK in DEFENSE

Dr. Will Alexander of the OPM, speaking in Atlantic City, said defense industries will need 4,000,000 more workers by January. He said, as examples, the San Diego, San Francisco and Vallejo areas of California will need 31,000; Detroit, 66,000 to 88,000; Philadelphia, 70,000; northern New Jersey, 30,000; Dallas and Fort Worth, 17,200; and Wichita 7,000. He asked employers not to discriminate against persons with necessary skills because of race, religion or color.

Labor Secretary Perkins reported 324,000 workers will be needed in the shipbuilding industry, 408,000 in aircraft, 291,000 in machine tools and ordnance and 384,000 in other defense industries. She said the greatest single need is for 156,000 skilled machinists and 139,000 semi-skilled assemblers.

War Secretary Stimson announced that skilled workers in the army will be released. If required in key civilian jobs, upon the request of former employers. Sidney Hillman, OPM associate diector general, again appealed to all unemployed, all persons not in defense industries, and all persons who can do highly skilled work than required by their present job, to register at local public employment offices so they may be trained and placed in defense work.

PRICES—Bureau of Labor Stastics reported food prices increased for the sixth consecutive month and are now about 6.5 per cent above last November. Prices of all foods moved upward but the latest increase resulted from advances in the prices of dairy products, fresh fruit, vegetables, pork and lamb, the bureau said.

The Department of Justice announced Federal Grand Juries in San Francisco, New York, Philadelphia, Hartford, Denver, Dubuque and Washington have indicted 300 firms and individuals in a nation-wide drive to prevent unwarranted increases in food costs.

AGRICULTURE — Agricultural Secretary Wickard asked for a one-third increase in Cheddar cheese productions and a one fourth increase in evaporated milk. He said an increase in total milk production, asked several weeks ago has been made, but the milk supply must increase in areas surrounding cheese and evaporated milk plants. He said prices would be supported by government purchases for lease-lend activities.

HOME DEFENSE—New York's Mayor LaGuardia, Director of the Office of Civilian Defense, reported it will take at least a year to obtain equipment to protect the nation's cities during bombing raids. He said it would cost about $43,000 each to equip the permanent fire companies in the country, and in many places auxiliary fire companies would be needed.

NAVY—Navy Secretary Knox announced the launching of the 35,000 ton battleship South Dakota five months ahead of schedule. He said he hoped the warship would be ready for service by January although this normally takes a year after launching. Knox said the navy's 35,000 ton ships far exceed in power, guns and armor the sunken German warship Bismarck. The navy announced that all Atlantic bases acquired from Great Britain are now available for limited operations and will be completely finished within a year.

ARMY AIR — The War Department announced high school graduates without sufficient education to become officers may enlist in the air corps for training as pilots. Applicants between 19 and 22 will receive preference. The army said eventually 20 per cent of its polits may be enlisted men who will be trained to fly and given the rating of flight sergeant with pay of $108 to $207 per month, depending on length of service.

The War Department also announced Army Air Corps aviation cadets now receive the same pay and allowances as Navy and Marine flyers and receive a $500 bonus for each year or fraction of a year of active

SELECTIVE SERVICE—Selective Service Deputy Director Hershey asked Congress to approve legisation authorizing deferment of all men, 27 or more years old last October 16. SS Headquarters amended regulations to permit review of classification of any time prior to induction.

BIG DECREASE IN SRA RELIEF IN NEVADA COUNTY

The number of needy unemployed persons receiving aid under the SRA in Nevada County on May 31 was 53 per cent of what it was one year before, on May 31, 1940, California Taxpayers Association stated today, analyzing the trend of the SRA case load in California counties during the past year.

During the year, SRA cases in the county at the end of each quarter were as follows: 95 on May 31, 66 on August 31; 61 on November 30; on February 28, 1941; and 50 at the end of May of this year, the association found.

This trend, the association stated, reflects both seasonal fluctations in demands for unemployment relief and the increase in employment generally.

"Any guess as to the number of employable unemployed persons who will be dependent on public relief during the coming year would be a hazardous undertaking," the taxpayers association declared. "The number of people employed throughout the United States is increasing steadily and California has a large share of the defense industries which are using large numbers of men and women."

Talented Children To Present Play

The Karavan Kiddies, consisting of fourteen youngsters ranging in age from four to 16 years, have chosen Nevada City for a two weeks vacation and while here will give two presentations of their play: "The Isle of the Boogie-Boo".

Under the sponsorship of the High School PTA, the youngsters will give their entertainment Thursday and Friday nights in the Elementary School Auditorium, at 8 o'clock. They are a talented group. Many of them have appeared on the stage and the screen, and some of them have been heard over the radio.

The play is based on the heroic conduct of a boy scout, and the plot is of absorbing interest to both children and grown-ups.

STATE FAIR TO MAKE NATION'S DEFENSE THEME

SACRAMENTO, June 23 — Plans for a salute to the nation's defense program and the United Service Organizations, as a feature of the annual California State Fair, opening launched today.

At the same time, directors of the state's 87th exposition designated Nationa Defense as the theme of the 1941 fair, and approved plans for a colorful military spectacle, with contingents of the army and navy participating.

The board also voted to set aside a special day at the state fair, August 29 through September 7, in recognition of the work of the United Service Organizations in assisting draftees and defense workers.

CITIES RECEIVE HUGE SUM FROM FEDERAL FUNDS

An anaylsis of State Controller Harry B. Riley's report on the financial transactions of cities and the counties shows that local taxation does not account for all of the cost of operating those governmental units.

Appropriations and gifts to cities from other agencies, principally the state, have increased 445 per cent in the last ten years, Controller Riley revealed. Grants to counties increased 251 per cent in the same period.

The state and to some extent the federal government have assumed the burden of educational expenses together with the cost of providing aid to the needy aged, blind and unemployed, thereby reducing the direct tax burden on local taxpayers, Riley explained.

In 1930 the cities of California received only $5,418,473 as subventions from outside sources. By last year the amount had increased to $29,536,651 an increase of $24,118,178.

The state's fifty-seven countiees, excluding San Francisco which is classed as a city, received $42,091,618 in 1930; last year they received $147,q68,707, in increase of $105,677,089.

Of appropriations made to counties by the state and other agencies in 1940 $73,040,682 was for educational purposes; $47,449,219 for charities; $19,480,889 for highway and street purposes. The federal government contributed $28,872,522 in relief funds to counties.

The rapid expansion of governmental activities in the last ten years is reflected by figures which show that the combined receipts of state, conties and city increaed from $27,807,166 in 1930 to $1,383,699,626 in 1940 an increase of $555,892,460.
